CLEVELANDERS HELP CELEBRATE SPARS' BIENNIAL

Women Serving Coast Guard Mark Anniversary With Work for Victory

Filling jobs as varied as their names, Greater Cleveland women serving in SPARS this week observe the second anniversary of their organization's founding.

Scattered over the country doing all types of work from typing to mechanics, the Spars have done their job and will continue to accomplish results until the war is won.

Greater Cleveland Spars are hard at work in large district offices and in small shore stations, at coast guard air bases and at seaports. Wherever there is a coast guard installation in this country, there you will find Spars on the job.

A survey of 20 Greater Cleveland Spars gives an idea of the varied assignments being performed by these women in blue.

Three on West Coast

Three of the 20 are stationed in Seattle. They are Yeoman (Third Class) Ruth Kehoe, 476 E. 126th Street, in the transportation office there; Seaman (Second Class) Jeane Snyder, of Lakewood, in the communications office, and Seaman (First Class) Marjorie Miller, 14730 Terrace Road, East Cleveland, doing general office work.

Two of the 20 drew assignments at air stations, namely, Ship's Cook (Third Class) Marion B. Dole, 1840 Idlewood Avenue, East Cleveland, at St. Petersburg, Fla., and Seaman (First Class) Emily Garrod, 12613 Superior Avenue, East Cleveland, at Biloxi, Miss.

Yeoman (Third Class) Jane L. Holstein, 2626 N. Moreland Boulevard, Shaker Heights, handles records of ordnance equipment and ammunition in Charleston, S. C. Also working in the coast guard district office in Charleston, is Seaman (Second Class) Helen Kovach, 1901 E. 66th Street.

California stations have three SPARS from this group. They are Seaman (First Class) Ruth L. Johnson, 3003 Yorkshire Road, Cleveland Heights, on duty in San Francisco; Yeoman (Second Class) Margaret K. Secor, 1447 Spring Garden Avenue, Lakewood, on recruiting duty in Los Angeles, and Radioman (Second Class) Stella M. Schultz, 11805 Willard Avenue, Garfield Heights, at Long Beach.

Three in Florida

Three others are stationed at the headquarters of the Seventh Naval District at Miami, Fla. Seaman (First Class) Louise McClintock, 1552 Addison Road N. E., is a messenger in the office of the captain of the port; Hospital Apprentice (Second Class) Amelia L. Buganski, 8404 Pulaski Avenue N. E., is stationed at the coast guard infirmary there, and Yeoman (Third Class) Dina C. Licciardi, 3591 East Boulevard S. E., is in the marine inspection office.

Assigned to duty in St. Louis, Mo., are three more Spars from this area. Yeoman (Second Class) Margaret A. Stettenfeld, 20425 Kinsman Road, Shaker Heights, works in the hydrographic section; Storekeeper (Second Class) Emma F. Zittlau, 2069 E. 96th Street, is working in the contracts and vouchers section, and Yeoman Marthella J. Evick, 12818 St. Clair Avenue N. E., is in the temporary reserve office.

New York is the home base for Seaman Maryland B. Romp, 4105 Clybourne Avenue S. E., who is stationed at the clothing supply depot there.

Down in New Orleans are three others, namely, Yeoman (Third Class) Thelma E. Brown, 16508 Elsienna Avenue N. E.; Storekeeper Yolanda B. Nielsen, 1351 E. 117th Street, and Yeoman (Second Class) Loretta M. Kollar, 110 E. 202d Street, Euclid.

Thus the second anniversary of the establishment of the SPARS, finds its members observing it in a practical manner—replacing men for the job of fighting and efficiently doing the work assigned to them.

Keeps Lines Open at Front; Promoted

The Silver Star Medal and a promotion to a captaincy have been awarded to First Lieut. Nicholas Opalic, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Opalic, 16012 Arcade Avenue N. E., it was learned yesterday.

CAPT. NICHOLAS OPALIC

Capt. Opalic was cited for his work in keeping open communications between the front lines at headquarters during a bitter engagement in France last July.

"On July 23, 1944, in the vicinity of Raids, France, there was a break in the communications line for two units," the citation reads. "Opalic and a crew were out to repair and were caught in a terrific concentration of artillery and mortar fire which later proved to have broken our lines in two other places. The men were hesitant to continue with repairs and would have left the breaks unrepaired at the time if Opalic had not taken his wire vehicle, driven it himself and continued to work under very heavy fire. The crew, seeing Opalic working, returned to the job, repaired the breaks with good communications resulting."

Capt. Opalic is a graduate of Collinwood High School and starred as a football and basketball player. He entered the army in March, 1941, and went overseas 11 months ago. He has three brothers in service, Sergt. George, in France; Sergt. Michael, in the southwest Pacific, and Pfc. Daniel, in India.

Chagrin Major Is Given Bronze Star

Maj. James Taylor Lewis, jr., 39, Chagrin Falls, has been awarded the Bronze Star Medal for directing the manufacture of a device to enable tanks to penetrate hedgerows in Normandy in the fighting in that area last summer, it was announced yesterday.

MAJ. JAMES T. LEWIS, JR.

His citation read:

"He personally directed the manufacture of a special device, which, when attached to the front of a tank, created a passage for the tank through the thick and otherwise impassable hedgerows in Normandy.

"Working under the pressure of time and extreme scarcity of materials, he improved the production method and designed a special means of attaching this rhinoceros device, which made possible the completion of the project when it was needed for a major armed attack.

"By his ingenuity, untiring efforts and expert supervision, Maj. Lewis materially contributed to the advance of our forces during the battle in France."

Maj. Lewis, who is attached to an ordnance outfit with the American First Army in Belgium, entered the service as a captain in February, 1942, and went overseas last April. He went to France shortly after D-Day last June.

He is one of the founders and president of the Lewis Welding & Engineering Corp. in Bedford. His wife, Barbara, and son, James Taylor Lewis III, 3, live in Chagrin Falls.
